Title of Pedagogy	Case based learning: Intellectual Property Rights and Biosafety
Objective	To enhance awareness and understanding of Intellectual Property Rights among students through innovative, real-world-oriented teaching methodologies.
Methodology	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Given the case selections to the students.</li><li>• We have chosen landmark IP legal cases, Apple v. Samsung</li><li>• The reasons for choosing Apple v. Samsung are its relevance to learning objectives.</li><li>• This case is of balanced complexity and it has real-world applicability.</li><li>• Students were assigned readings relevant for the above-mentioned case.</li><li>• Students had presented the case in a legal brief format, Included the key facts, stakeholders, legal issues, and outcomes of the case.</li><li>• Students have discussed the case in groups of 3-4 members, the discussion included legal implications and strategic options of the discussed case.</li><li>• We also role-played of plaintiff, defendant, judge and policy-maker.</li><li>• Encourage students to reflect on how their understanding evolved.</li><li>• Discuss alternative outcomes or strategies for the case.</li><li>• Students have assessed the case by making presentations.</li></ul>

Outcome	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Real-World Application: Helps students connect theory with practice.</li><li>• Critical Thinking: Encourages debate, reasoning, and legal interpretation.</li><li>• Retention: Case-based learning helps retain complex IPR concepts better than rote memorization.</li><li>• Engagement: Interactive discussions around real conflicts spark deeper interest.</li><li>• Preparation for Legal Practice: Mimics how lawyers' approach real cases.</li></ul>
